CITY AND COUNTRY

The Young Bachelors' dance, held in the pavilion last Friday evening was a great success, despite the fact that the inclemency of the weather prevented many from attending. Harpur's full orchestra supplied the music, and Mrs. Larson attended to the festivities. The Young Bachelors intend giving another ball in the spring.

Some men need a big humiliation about so often to keep them reasonably modest.

Men like to pluck a sucker, but how they despise him!

Mr. Harry Burns, of May & Burns, returned home Wednesday, after an extended trip through Canada and the United States.

Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Bunyan, of Calgary, is registered at the Palace hotel.

Geo. McAllister and J. H. Pottsworth, of Port Moody, were guests at the Palace hotel this week. They were agreeably surprised at the progress of the Ambitious City, and are contemplating locating here.

Messrs. Irwin & Billings Company, limited, have had issued, a very neat and comprehensive map and circular of North Vancouver. The map is a bird's-eye view, showing the public buildings and business blocks, while the letterpress describes the rare opportunities for investment in the Ambitious City. Copies are being liberally distributed, and besides being an excellent advertisement for the firm, is also a good booster for the town.

Mr. T. S. Nye has began excavations for basements for two residences, which he proposes building on Queen street.

Mr. D. Cameron, municipal engineer, examined the road for his report on Lonsdale extension north, which will be extended three-quarters of a mile. He found an easy grade for a mile and a half past the city limits, giving a splendid grade for a car line to the mountain.

James Smith, of Camp "L," Rock Bay, has been visiting friends here for the past few days.

A. G. Mattingsley, who has been on an extended tour in India, is registered at the Palace hotel.

Every man believes, way down deep, that he is mighty attractive to the women.

A concert will be given in Larson's hall on Tuesday evening, November 20th, at 8:15 o'clock. An excellent program is promised. Hear Brian Cassidy, the young violinist. Tickets 50c., on sale at the hotel and drugstore. Children half price.

"What is home without a mother?" Ask the newly married couple and they will tell you it is simply delightful.

An advance issue of the November Searchlight has reached our editorial desk, and is, if anything, better than before. This publication contains many valuables in the various departments of modern business, and there are few business men indeed who cannot profit by the perusal of its pages. In addition to the practical articles on business, there are several items of interest purely from a literary and social standpoint. It should be a matter of pride to Canadians to know that a magazine of this class is being published in Canada, and that it is now no longer necessary to depend upon Americans for a magazine of business.

Miss Annie Borg, of the dining room at Hotel North Vancouver, has left to reside permanently at Portland. While there she made hosts of friends.

Nelson Johnson, of Winnipeg, is registered at the Palace hotel. He will leave for San Francisco and way points today.

S. F. Williams, of Kenora, B. C., is a guest at the Palace hotel.

Miss Olga Larson and Miss Muriel Fugler, of this city, were winners in the World's prize contest, which closed last Saturday. Miss Larson polled 710,000 votes and won a Heintzman piano. Miss Fugler, with 414,000 ballots, won a scholarship.

Mrs. J. W. West and daughter, of Seattle, are visiting friends here. They will return to the Queen City next Tuesday.

O. Golle, mining engineer, and Alex. Rogers, a well-known mining man, who are interested in claims in the Queen Charlotte Islands, are stopping at the hotel North Vancouver. They will return within a fortnight.

T. B. Warren, of Victoria, is registered at Hotel North Vancouver.

O. M. Trail, of Port Essington, paid the town a flying visit on Tuesday.

R. R. Munton, of Nelson, is a guest at the Hotel North Vancouver.

Mrs. E. L. Cripps has returned from a visit to the East.

There arrived in this city on Wednesday H. M. McCormick, of Chicago, who is interested in copper propositions. He left for the east yesterday, and will return early in March.

Crabs are selling at 6-8c. per dozen, and a few local fishermen are busy there days catching them. On Wednesday one of the catchers landed 280. Some years ago there was a crab canning factory here that did a fair business, but dissolved on account of scarcity of the shell fish. They now, however, seem to be plentiful.

Boost our business houses.

Eggs should keep quite well for two or three months in a cool dry cellar. They would deteriorate somewhat in time, but would probably be stale, not decomposed. Eggs in cold storage are kept in a cold dry air. Dampness in the storage rooms will affect the pasteboard filling in the cases and impart a disagreeable odor and taste of wet brown cardboard to the eggs. So far as I have seen reports of tests with water glass, says a writer in Farm Poultry, the eggs have been put in stone jars and the jars covered.

Some women are like a good horse; it is an insult to tie them.

A. R. Steacy is nothing if not original. He advertised this week: "Fresh British eggs. We scorn the foreign yoke."

It has been stated that the local Knights of Pythias will shortly put on the boards at Larson's pavilion the historic melodrama "Damon and Pythias." The local lodge is growing by leaps and bounds.

A well-known and respected lady of the district is sporting the mark of Cain on her brow, as the result of being in a hurry to get out of her home and forgetting to open the front door before doing so.

The advance agent for the weather registered at Pete Larson's yesterday. He wore a lemon duster with fur trimming.

If you are miserable, you are exactly what your friends want you to be.

Subscribe for THE EXPRESS.

D. S. C. Kemp, of the L. O. T. M., will organize a branch of that order in North Vancouver on Wednesday evening, November 27th, in the K. P. hall, over Burns' meat market. The organization will be preceded by a public meeting at 8 p. m. A cordial invitation is extended to the public. A good programme has been provided.

Irwin & Billings will shortly put district lot 544, to be known as Harbor View Tract, on the market. This is one of the most beautiful residential sites in the city. Lots will sell from $175 to $300.

LOST—An English setter bitch (Zyt), white lemon ears; reward for information leading to recovery; anyone found harboring same will be prosecuted. E. R. Haswell, Third street.

FOR SALE.—Two suites of bedroom furniture, dining and kitchen tables, cook stove, heater, baby carriage, chairs, carpets, etc. Enquire Alexander & Townsley.

It was with no little exhilaration that citizens learned that the football team had tasted a victory after many thirsty days. Unsuccessful though they may have been, yet with the knowledge that they had honestly and faithfully fought, but fortune seemed not to smile on the sunny shores of the north side of the inlet. With a good start for the B. C. cup, the members of the team should stick together and not neglect their duty on the line-up which means, if they do, the old story of defeat.

A party of sportsmen consisting of W. H. Bullock, A. Emerson and Roy Storey, returned from Powell lake last Tuesday after a successful two weeks' hunt. The party camped in an old prospector's cabin near the lake during their stay. The boys say the game is very plentiful. Six deer and one goat composed the bag which they brought home with them.

Those in North Vancouver who are interested in mountain climbing should attend at the Tourist association rooms, Vancouver, this evening, where a mountain club will be organized.

At a former meeting held about two weeks ago, officers and a committee were appointed and tonight the latter men will consist of framing the constitution and bylaws.

World's Metropolis.

London, November 1.—London in figures is quite as imposing as the metropolis itself. The vital statistics given in the thirteenth annual volume (1906-7) issued by the London County Council deal with every department of this life of the people.

To begin with, it is estimated that the population of Greater London (which includes the administrative county, Hackney, parts of Surrey, Kent, Essex and Hertfordshire) is 7,417,836; the estimated rate of the administrative county (6 m., the city and the metropolitan boroughs) is 4,758,571.

The annual expenditure of the various bodies is given for 1903-4, the latest year. The total reaches the enormous sum of $213,848,340, of which the London County Council expended $69,373,455, while the metropolitan police account is $12,538,845.

Greater London comprises 443,403 acres, with 850,474 (1901 figures) inhabited houses, in addition to which 29,122 are assigned only by the day and 14,577 are empty.

The valuation shows that 51,951 more pages took place between bachelors and spinsters, the most popular age for a man being 25, 12,555 marrying then. From 21 to 25, 11,710 marriages took place, and from 25 to 30 there was a drop to 4,720.

Only two marriages of girls of 15 are recorded—one to a man of 23 and the other to a bachelor of 24. Thirteen girls who were babies at 16, while at 21 there were 15,818, dropping to 800 at 25 years old, and to nine and five at 30 and 35. Nine men united matrimony with spinsters at 65, and three between 70 and 75.

The number of bachelors marrying widows was 8,477, the years between 25 and 30 being the most popular, while widows of 70 and 75 were in greater demand. Two thousand and ninety-one widowers—the majority of them being between 35 and 45 years old—married spinsters. The marriages of widows and widowers numbered 1,514.

Six men of 80 found helpmeets, and nine women of 70 and 75 are included in the total of 39,654 marriages.

These figures all relate to 1905, the last year for which complete returns are available, and the number of births is given as 126,550—67,456 girls and 64,094 boys. Stepney heads the list with 5,124 births, both rooms were 1,6-6-6, and Islington third with 4,804. In the city there were only 892 births.

The total of deaths was 72,005. There were 533 cases of suicide in London during the twelve months, and fifty-three of homicide.

Some of the items dividing from in the remaining 534 pages of information about London's life are summarized in the following table:

Prisoners (in January, 1905)	144,629
Unemployed (applications received)	99,742

The Glorious Fourth.

New York, July 4.—The sacrifice of life by reckless celebrators of the 4th of July began today with the accidental shooting of an Italian woman by her nephew, who struck with remorse at the death of his aunt, shot and instantly killed himself. Mrs. Alfonsa Fucarino, wife of a retired Italian contractor living in the Bronx, and Salvatore Caro, aged 19, were the victims of the tragedy. Caro was amusing himself by shooting at the brick walls around his home. Mrs. Fucarino stood nearby, watching him, when one of the bullets glancing from the wall struck her over the right eye, penetrating the brain, and causing instant death. Overcome with horror, the boy instantly placed his revolver to his head and fired, his body falling across that of his victim. Both were dead before the witnesses of the tragedy could reach them. Numberless accidental injuries are the outcome of the careless use of explosives. The use by Italians of revolvers loaded with ball cartridges instead of blanks is accountable for a number of wounds.

Jones had a vegetable garden in which took a great interest. Brown, his next-door neighbor, had one also, and both men were especially interested in their potato patches. One morning, meeting by the fence, Jones said: "How is it, Mr. Brown, you are never troubled with caterpillars, while my patches are overrun with them?"

"My friend, that is easily explained," replied Brown. "I rise early in the morning, gather all the caterpillars from my bushes and throw them into your garden."—Tit Bits.

BUILDING RAILWAY TO SHIP OUT THEIR LOGS

Sayward Company Carrying on Big Work on the Mainland

The Sayward Lumber company of this city expects to have the logging railway which it is constructing from Powell lake on the mainland to salt water finished by September of the present year. The company has 100,000,000 feet of timber in its tracts in the district of Powell lake and the railway is necessitated by the fact that all attempts to log in this section have been unsuccessful owing to the current in the river and the number of falls encountered.

The railway which will be 8,000 feet long will have a 12 per cent grade. A thirty-ton engine will be used to haul the loaded cars. The work has been in charge of James Springer who is expected to arrive in the city shortly from Vancouver where he at present is.

In addition to this logging road there will be 400 feet of breakwater constructed to enclose a booming ground, and the limits will be logged for a distance of twelve miles back from the lake. A tug will be used on the lake to tow logs to the railportage, over which they will be hauled to the beach. The camp will be operated with a force of sixty men, and three donkey engines will be used.

local lumber yards has necessitated the mill owners employing more Japanese and the men of that nation who have come over in large numbers during the past month or two have found employment readily in the local yards in shifting the lumber. At the Royal City mills hardly a dozen Hindus can be seen at work in the yards and similar reports are received from the Brunette and Fraser River mills.

The cause of the sudden move on the part of the Hindus has been found in the fact that they have, owing to their rights as British subjects, free admittance to the United States as long as they are infected with no noxious disease. This has long been the point against which the Hindus rebelled and at different intervals have refused to permit the health officers along the borders to examine them according to the United States immigration laws.

Affairs on the other side have reached such a stage with the mill owners that they feel that something must be done in order to handle the lumber from their yards and owing to the fact that the Chinese were excluded by a prohibitive head tax and the Japanese do not feel disposed to venture into U. S. territory the mill owners have made offers of $2.50 and $2.75 a day if the Hindus would go across to the other side and work for them. Although this offer is nominally a breach of the alien labor law the men are not generally employed until they reach the other side of the line and start to work in the yards where they are causing great discontent among the white mill workers.

One of the Hindus was spoken to as he was leaving the city last night on the Great Northern train and asked where he was going. "Tcome" he answered "mebbe lan of press. This is not. Too cole ere. Say warmer in Tcoma."

It is commonly known by the people who have spoken with the Hindus much that they expected to find this country the promised land, flowing with milk and honey. Instead of finding that they found that they were

OFFICER BOURKE IN SORRY PLIGHT

Heavyweight on Police Force Crashes Through Earth's Crust.

With firm and heavy footsteps Officer Bourke ascended the beat yesterday morning near the C. P. R. depot, little dreaming of the unusual sensation in store for him. Stepping on the confining to the weak crust on the station Bourke planted his right pedal extremity squarely on ground, concealing a hole which he had not before known existed. Bourke's weight on it while making up his mind to move his left foot forward, caused the ground beneath to cave in, and by the time Bourke had realized what was happening, the cavern yawned at his feet. Bourke fell. The hole proved also to be a deep one, for the officer had no room to frame subterranean obsequies and the remainder of his days by making a mighty effort and stretching out his arms, succeeded in keeping his head and shoulders out of the hole. His feet did not touch bottom and, fearing that he might slip through and be lost to sight for ever, Bourke raised an alarm by voice and called for help.

The mighty roar that escaped his lips jarred the soil and a subdued rumbling underneath gave warning that the chasm was about to widen. Bourke was in a sorry predicament. If he called for help, his words would be supports from their frail foundation, and if he remained there, he must eventually slip through.

Fortunately for the officer, a party of Orangemen—many of them—happened along, and with the help of ropes, planks and poles, hastened to his rescue. When finally rescued from his ludicrous predicament, Bourke marched away, stepping as lightly as possible until he reached Columbia street, where indications are more firm.

The hole in which Bourke fell is supposed to be a abandoned sewer, which had been improperly covered and which collapsed when the unusual strain of Bourke's weight was placed upon it. The hole appears to be about ten feet deep and is supposed to run out to the river. A blockade erected around it immediately after Bourke vacated his position as stop cop.

LITTLE BROWN SPY CAUGHT RED HANDED

Japanese Sketch Artist Had Valuable Drawings In His Possession When Caught.

New York, July 12—The World today prints the version of the arrest of a Japanese at San Diego, Cal., on the charge that he was drawing the fortifications at Port Rosecrans.

The intruder was valuable in the very art of sketching the complements of four-inch guns at Fairby Wilkerson, and copies of plans he had made of the torpedo casement and the electric machinery connected with keys controlling the mine field of San Diego harbor were found in his possession. The plans include everything which might be of use to a foreign power in case an attack was made at that point on the Pacific coast.

"According to a military source, he even had records of the anti-caliber target practice made during the present encampment of the Fifth regiment National guards and the regulars. It is said that this Japanese had been working in accord with the Japanese servants at the fort who live in the officers' houses, and that he had in his possession when arrested most elaborate photographs, giving all possible positions of the guns, besides views and a panorama of the harbor and city.

WEARERS OF YELLOW WELCOMED IN CITY

Grandest Gathering of Orangemen Ever Seen In New Westminster—Ideal Weather For Celebration—Visitors Charmed With Reception.

What is authoritatively reported to be one of the largest, if not the largest, orange celebrations ever held in British Columbia was conducted yesterday in New Westminster. The day, so far as the regalling of the weather was concerned, could not have been better, a fact which contributed greatly to the success of the celebration, and in addition to this natural advantage, the efforts of the spoils committee was largely responsible for the excellent entertainment afforded.

Among the thousands of Orangemen who thronged the streets and the park from one o'clock till after dark were not only members from all the lower mainland lodges, but adherents of the Orange order from the upper country and from the island. Interest was added to the event by the presence in the city of a number of grand lodge officers, among whom were D. C. McLaren of Vancouver, R. W. G. M., H. G. Taylor, R. W. D. M., Capt. George McKeddie, Vancouver, D. R. W. D. M. Edwin Bush, Mission, R. W. G. S., E. F. Clarke, Vancouver, R. W. G. treasurer. Among the members of the right worshipful grand lodge seated in the city who took part were Rev. A. deB. Owen, R. W. G. C., and W. E. Dunlop, R. W. secretary.

Although a number of visitors came to the city on Thursday evening by trains and boats, the crowd did not commence to arrive until Friday morning, when by till noon a steady stream of Orangemen and their friends arrived, principally by way of the B. C. Electric railway. According to official figures obtained fro mthe B. C. Electric company, from 1500 to 2000 people were brought to this city from Vancouver yesterday in tram. The number of people arriving on the steamers and trains was of course a matter of conjecture, but it was conservatively estimated that 6,000 people took part in the celebration.

The main business of the day's events were scheduled to transpire at Queen's park, and thither the Orangemen wended their way soon after one o'clock, followed by thousands of interested spectators. The procession formed on Columbia street, near the C. P. R. depot at first, but before H. M. Abercrombie, grand director of ceremonies, got the ranks formed, the extended line finally came to rest on the Royal City hotel. When the ranks finally moved towards the park, it presented a most exhilirating scene, with pennons, sashes and banners waving in the breeze. It was fully three-quarters of a mile long, and contained Orangemen from many sections of the district.

Following was the order in which the various organizations were placed in the column: Orange Young Britons, made up principally of New Westminster and Vancouver members; Orange Young Britons' band, Mission city band, No. 1 district lodges, including Mission, Abbotsford, Mount Lehman and Agassiz. Vancouver Lodge No. 1503, Vancouver Fife and Drum band, Vancouver Rhenish Lodge No. 1505, Salvation Army band, Vancouver Lodge No. 1615, Vancouver Lodge No. 1617, Vancouver N. Clarke Wallace band, Vancouver Lodge No. 1671, Fairview Lodge, Mount Pleasant Lodge No. 1842, Mount Pleasant Fife and Drum band, Vancouver Britannia Lodge, Vancouver Harmony Lodge No. 128, Harmony Fife and Drum band, New Westminster Lodge No. 1150, and New Westminster Lodge 1593.

Orangemen from 1000 to four thousand were made yesterday of the number of people who washed in the parade from the depot to the park. The figure was placed at 2000 by the lightening calculator of the evening newspaper. These guesses were all much over the mark, as 909 people marched in the parade by actual count. Gowan Macgowan ticked off the passers on an automatic counter as they entered the park gate. The great bulk of people who attended at the park did not follow the procession, but wended their ways to the common centre by various routes, many of them going by tram.

The first to occupy the attention of the vast audience was the speeches which were delivered in front of the grand stand. A large platform had been erected, and on this were assembled several members of the grand lodge, members of the county lodges, Ald. Johnston, representing the city, Thomas Gifford, M. P. P. and others.

A list of speakers had been drafted, but for various reasons this was not adhered to. W. E. Dunlop, master of Westminster County lodge, filled the position of chairman, and in his opening remarks, expressed a general welcome especially on behalf of his lodge to the grand lodge officers. He was greatly pleased to have the grand lodge officers present at the largest celebration ever held in New Westminster.

Mr. Dunlop then called upon Ald. Johnston, to address the assemblage on behalf of the city.

Ald. Johnston's address of welcome was interesting and ably delivered. He stated that in the absence of Mayor Keary and also Acting Mayor Shiles, he had been asked to greet the Orangemen, although he felt that he was the least capable of the seven members of the council board. He was, however, pleased to welcome to the city such a splendid body of men. He had learned to esteem the Orange order, first because of his father's connection with it and also for the manner in which it was uplifting and ennobling mankind. He had heard his father say, before his death that the ritual of the Orange order was the best that had ever been written. He had learned something of the ritual since, although he was not a member of the order, and he believed it was the greatest of all fraternal organization. The speaker mixed considerably facetiarity in his remarks with splendid effect. He not only welcomed the Orangemen to the city, but gave them the freedom of the city as well, not only for the day, but as much of the night as they cared to make use of. The people of New Westminster were proud to have the Orangemen with them, and he, as the representative of the city, was delighted at welcoming the visitors in a manner fitting the dignity of such an important organization.

The chairman then called on D. C. McLaren, grand master of the grand lodge, who, in a brief speech, expressed his thanks for the hearty welcome extended by the city, and also for the attendance of so many members of subordinate lodges, owing to his recent illness, Mr. McLaren did not prolong his remarks.

After a selection had been rendered by the Salvation Army band, Rev. Adell Owen, grand chaplain, was called. He dealt briefly with the principles of the order, and took a strong plea for protestant support of the order. King William was not honored by Orangemen solely for the victory achieved by him at the battle of the Boyne, but also for his stand in the interests of Orangism. He hoped to see the time when Canada would give a united protestant vote, and when she would not have to look to Rome for religious instruction, but rather would completely enjoy freedom and religious liberty.

Mr. Allen, of South Grey, Ontario, delivered an interesting address, dealing with the progress of the order in Canada. Ontario, he stated, was the cradle of Orangism in Canada, and although many Orangemen had come out from the old province and had settled in the west, there was still enough stalwarts back there to keep the order thriving. He was sorry to say that the political parties of Canada had stooped to give privileges to the Roman Catholics in this country, and for that reason the Orange order was as much needed today as at any time in its history. "What organization is there to speak out for protestantism if the Orangemen do not," declared the speaker. Continuing, he pointed out that Orangism was the only organized body that stands out

LOGGING FIGURES SHOW IMMENSE CUT

Month of June Not Record Breaker—Lumber and Shingles Orders Slow.

The total cut of logs on the coast of British Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, was 328,340,662 feet, according to the books of the government supervisor of scaling. The cut for June alone was 39,166,946 feet, so that the total for that month was no a record-breaker, as it was believed it would be.

It is estimated that the entire cut of British Columbia, including that from Dominion and interior lands, was just double the coast output, or a total cut for the entire province of 678,681,324 feet.

Orders for lumber have been coming in slowly, but the mills are behind in their cut, and are filling orders at three different prices according to the time the shingles were bought. The lowest price that shingles are being cut for is much below the market now. Few shingles have been bought at present prices, but when they are wanted it is said the present price will be paid.

The mills will be kept busy on old orders for many weeks yet. Prices are going up in the United States. They advanced 25 cents a thousand last week. This helps British Columbia, for it not only enables the mills of this province to sell more shingles in the United States in spite of the 20 cents a thousand tariff, but also prevents the dumping of American shingles on this market.

WISE MEN WORK TO DEFINE BOUNDARY

Geodetic Surveyors Now Finishing Work Commenced Nearly Fifty Years Ago.

Ottawa, July 12—The work of defining the international boundary line from the Rocky mountains to the Pacific coast will be completed in a few days.

W. F. King, chief astronomer of Canada, and Otto H. Tittmann, superintendent of the coast and geodetic survey of the United States, have Ottawa on Monday to inspect the work. They will be joined in the west by Dr. C. D. Walcott, a former director of the United States geological survey, and now secretary of the Smithsonian institute at Washington.

These three gentlemen were appointed a commission in 1902 to run survey and mark by monuments, all the boundary line from Lake Superior to the Pacific ocean. Surveyors have been at work on that part west of the summit of the Rocky mountains which is now about completed. About all the monuments have been placed and the commissioners will have formally take over the work on behalf of the two governments.

The international boundary line was first defined by the treaty of 1818, as following the forty-ninth parallel from the Rocky mountains to the ocean. It was surveyed by a joint commission who worked from 1859 to 1862. The survey then made was by no means complete. Long stretches in the mountains were left wholly undefined. The purpose of the present operations is to replace the old monuments, which were generally cairns of stones, by more permanent ones, and to survey the portions of the line over the mountains which were not touched by the previous commission, and to place marks wherever necessary.

NANAIMO HITTERS PROVE EASY MARKS

Local Baseball Team Secured Easy Victory Over Coal City Men.

One of the star attractions of the day was the baseball match between the New Westminster seniors and the cubbies from Nanaimo, which resulted in a victory for the locals by a score of 12 to 4. Owing to the lateness in getting started—about five o'clock—the usual nine innings were not played, it having been agreed upon early in the game that six rounds would be sufficient.

The result of the match was something of a surprise to many people who have heard the tales which have been wafted from the coal city of the exceeding prowness of the islanders. The improved condition of the New Westminster men was more than a match for the visitors, so much so that they had no chance to pull even at any stage of the match. The locals never batted better in their lives, and too much can not be said of the manner in which both outside and inside players fielded their positions. Spinks behind the mask produced a splendid exhibition of catching. Very few balls went by him and those that did slip away were as a rule unimportant. Curley Lewis is a crack pitcher, as is generally known and his play needs no comment. He succeeded in striking out ten men, making a better showing by three than Miller, who pitched for the visitors. Sinclair made a couple of sensational plays at first base, and Barbaree and J. Lewis made long drives from the plate which told well on the score card, men coming in on both of them.

The visitors played good ball, but were entirely outclassed by the locals. Turner, behind the bat, did good work, but Miller's pitching was quite enough. He was batted all over the chief diamond of the Nanaimo team, did considerable grumbling against outrage, as is characteristic of him, but as his habits are well known in New Westminster no person took him seriously. Smith, with some of his fellows, made objections to Dr. Doherty's rulings, but the consensus of opinion was that the match was fairly umpired.

The score card showed the following results:

sounds flowed on and on, and she began to grow frightened. Her fancy depicted the figures of old-time dandies.

Being well acquainted with music, she instantly recognized Rameau's sarabande. Shivering, she curled herself up in the bedclothes, covering her head with them, and tried to go to sleep, but sleep refused to come. The frightened woman only longed for the dawn, so that she might get up and turn out the "horrid screen," and whilst waiting she fell asleep, and slept so soundly that her maid, coming into the room at eleven o'clock, and pushing aside the screen, had some difficulty in arousing her.

"Has it stopped playing?" was her first question.

The maid looked at her mistress in amazement.

But Bertha was fully convinced that it had been a dream, and not wishing for a repetition of her alarm, she ordered the screen to be carried up into the garret or else to be taken to the market and sold.

The porter, folding up the unlucky screen, carried it out to the Apraxine market. Bertha lived in the Gorotovoi.

By a strange freak of Fate, the screen once more fell into the hands of Sozont Petrovitch, who bought it for three roubles; his experienced eye saw at once that the screen had been done up.

The porter put the screen up against the wall, and, receiving his ten-kopeck tip, departed.

Shortly afterwards, who should enter the shop but Peregrinoff himself. Illaria Andrevna, who had altered her opinion of her husband after his lucky purchase of the screen, had sent him herself to the shop to see if there were anything else of that sort to be picked up.

"Look, sir, how soon your purchase has come back again to me," said M. Sedoshovin, pointing to the screen.

Peregrinoff was transfixed with astonishment. He could not think why Yon Ejevitz had so quickly tired of his purchase, when he had been so keen on it.

Of course, the artist was instantly fired with desire to buy it again.

"I won't take less than a twenty-five-rouble note for it now," called out the dealer, "I gave two fivers for it myself," he added, seeing the artist wanted it.

But the latter did not stop to bargain; he paid the money and conveyed the screen home, to Illaria's amazement, who was afraid at first that Yon Ejevitz had sent it back, and wanted the money returned, too.

This time the screen was put straight back into its old place near the bed, and as soon as it was placed in position the notes of the sarabande re-echoed through the room.

Husband and wife looked at one another.

"You see, it wasn't our imagination, there really is music concealed somewhere," whispered the artist, "we must find out where it is."

They laid the screen on the floor, and the music ceased.

Carefully did Peregrinoff examine each corner of frame and pictures, but there was no trace of anything.

"What a torment the thing is!" mumbled Nitya, after a lengthy examination. Illaria, no less than he, was thoroughly puzzled by the mysterious screen.

"What can we do?" she said. "We must just put it up again and sell it as soon as we can find a purchaser."

Now they both understood why the screen had found its way back so quickly to Nedoshovin's shop.

"Put it near the bed," said Illaria. But how wonderful! As soon as the screen was put in its old place, the music began again.

"Wait a moment," said Nitya, catching hold of the frame. "I'll get at the secret, whatever it is!"

But directly he moved one half the music ceased.

Still Nitya not to be daunted; he again moved the frame, and the sounds began. Now he understood. The mechanism was in the leg of the middle division, and from the bronze hinges ran a tiny, invisible wire inside the frame.

When the screen stood in position the wires contracted, and the mechanism worked. But when it did not stand on the floor, or was too widely opened, or completely closed, the mechanism was useless.

It was a wonderful masterpiece of last century art.

The Peregrinoffs laughed when at length the secret was revealed.

The screen did not remain long in the artist's possession. A rich Englishman bought it for five thousand roubles.

Illaria Andrevna never has occasion now to scold her Nitya, who has a fine studio and plenty of orders.

The screen with cupids had brought them luck.

OLLA PODRIDA

Where He Wore His Crown.

A preacher, addressing a Sunday chool, toward the close of his re- arks said: "And, my little friends, you do all these things, some day u will wear a gold crown. Yes, ch of you, some day, will wear a ld crown."

A little chap on the front row, tching the teacher's eye, piped: My father wears one now."

"No!" said the preacher; "that can't !"

"Yes, he does, right on his tooth," id the little chap.

The trouble with some people is at they allow themselves to be dis- uraged by criticism, and the trouble th others is that they do not.

that stints her heart to feed her brain will sooner or later die of soul starvation.

The jealous wife shouldn't try to lay the ghost of her husband's first love. No man remembers any wo- man that long.

After all, a mother's love may not keep a man awake at night, but it is the one love that sits up with him when the other loves have gone their various ways.

A woman presiding at a club meet- ing, no matter how handsome she is, doesn't appeal to a man like the fluffy little creature who cooks on the chaf- ing dish.

It Wasn't Like Them.

In a country Scottish village, some thirty years ago, a well-to-do far- mer and his wife died within a few weeks of each other. In their mem- ory a stained-glass window was plac- ed in the parish church. A neighbor- ing farmer, a friend of the departed, called on the minister and requested to see the widow. The minister com- plied, and showed him into the church. After gazing at the window for some time, the farmer said, "Weel, sir, I'll do deny that it's a braw win- dow, but, to my mind, it disna feature the auld folks very strong." The win- dow represented two of the Apostles; but the farmer thought that it was a painting of his old friends.

An Unappreciated Author.

At a dinner given in his honour not long ago, a popular writer told of the advice he once gave an aspiring young novelist who worried him with his books. It appears that the em- bryo Fielding was better qualified to sell shoes than write novels. One day he came to the narrator in a great state of mind. He declared:

"No one will read my manuscripts. There is a conspiracy of silence against me."

"Join it," was the pitiless reply.

Five "Don'ts" for Unwed Girls.

Here are five Don'ts which may be worth considering by girls who are anxious to be married.

1. Don't marry merely because you "fall in love."

Ask yourself frankly if you are in love with the man himself, or with unimportant detail of dress or looks or manner that have caught your fancy.

2. Don't marry a man without an aim—a definite aim.

If you think enough of him to analise his character at all, go far enough to find out exactly what his purpose in life is—or if he has a pur- pose. Many men haven't any.

3. Don't marry a man who places undue importance upon dress, or looks, or position, or any superficial thing.

If a man is too fond of dress or display, if he thinks too much of so- ciety or merely idle pleasures, beware of putting your life's happiness in his hands.

4. Don't select a man who belittles your ability to help and inspire him.

A true man will believe in you and place confidence in your capacity as a helpmeet.

5. Don't marry a man who lacks force of character.

He not only must be a good man, but he must be forceful—positive in his goodness. Negative virtues do not impress the world.

Affectionate Children.

The tombstone of a mother buried at Appledore bears the following in- scription:

Here lies the mother of children five,
Three are dead and two alive,
Those that are dead preferring rather
To die with their mother than live with their father.

This is the message the telegraph messenger handed to him:

"Come as soon as you can. Am dying—— Kate."

Eight hours later he arrived, to be met by Kate herself.

"Why—what did you mean by send- ing me such a message?" he asked.

"Oh," she said, "I wanted to say that I was dying to see you, but my twelve words ran out, and I had to stop."

Island's North End

Interesting Article by Walter B. Anderson

MR. Walter B. Anderson recently made public some very interesting views respecting Vancouver Island and adjacent territory. He said:

"Terra incognita, by which I mean the northeastern portion of Vancouver Island, the adjacent mainland and the great inland islet dotted sea between these two lands, is not "unknown" in the strict sense of the term, for the trader, the lumberman, and the fisherman have for many years exploited it, but these men, who periodically leave civilization and are for months lost sight of, as completely as is a pebble dropped into a pool—these men rarely give their experiences to others than of their own callings, after the manner of their kind, hence the tourist hunter, the traveller seeking for new and strange surroundings, pass by, utterly unaware of the proximity of one of the most delightful parts of the world, speaking in the sense of natural beauty, wildness, and healthfulness. Many residents of Victoria, and chance visitors, are well acquainted with that part of the Gulf of Georgia between Ten Mile Point and Nanaimo, and of late years the salmon fishing off the mouth of Campbell river has attracted many to that place. Many and loud are the praises sung of the beauties of this truly lovely stretch of water, with its numerous pretty islands, gradually being occupied by settlers, but of the coast beyond and north of Campbell river on this island, and of Lund, across the gulf on the mainland, the average resident of Victoria and Vancouver, and the casual visitor, know nothing. He probably pictures it as a wild, inhospitable region, tenanted by treacherous Indian tribes and white outlaws, a rendezvous for cutthroats and smugglers, a land of snow, and rain, and fogs. Such at least is the impression given me by some who have inquired about this country, and who have been much surprised upon being assured to the contrary. To the jaded city resident, looking for a few weeks' rest in a beautiful quiet retreat, to the mountain climber seeking for new worlds to conquer, to the sportsman in search of unfrequented rivers where he may fish the trout undisturbed, of remote swamps where the elk still swarm, of mountain gorges where the grizzly may be found, this "unknown land" is a paradise.

Leaving Victoria, the business man, tired to death of the ceaseless grind of commerce, his system shaken from breathing impure air, his nerves unstrung by months of anxious business tension, takes boat for Van Anda, on Texada Island. He has determined to take a long promised holiday, has left his affairs in competent hands, and with two companions, a naturalist from Ottawa, and a sportsman friend from England, is seeking the spring of health, as did DeLeon the fountain of youth. Poor Ponce failed in his quest, but our jaded seeker will find the spring. Nay! has found its rills already.

In the steamer's hold is an assortment of foodstuffs, clothing, guns, cameras, fishing tackle, a good tent, and all the other necessary impedimenta for a comfortable camp in the wilds. A good power launch, with a small tender punt, form part of the outfit; and so carefully has the wary old camper, the naturalist, chosen the supplies, that when the launch is loaded at Van Anda wharf, every necessary is found in place, and no unnecessaries cumber the craft.

The first objective point after leaving Van Anda will be Powell river, the outlet to the lake of the same name, on the mainland, just across. Arriving there, camp is made, sufficient necessaries taken ashore, the rest left in the launch, which is securely moored, and left with canvas covering properly adjusted. A stay of three days is made here, during which time the voyagers explore the lake—a lovely sheet of water fifty miles long and about two miles wide, whose waters teem with trout, rainbow and cutthroat. The river is short, about three-quarters of a mile from outlet to seawater, a series of beautiful falls.

On the shores of the lake, and in a large tract of country lying between it and the Gordon Pasha chain of lakes, are some of the finest timber claims in British Columbia today, most of which have been held in reserve for years, but which will soon be logged. Several attempts have been made to log on Powell lake, but with indifferent success, owing largely to a mistaken policy of spending too little money initially. When proper preparations are made, the venture will prove easy and profitable.

Upon the fourth day three very different looking men from the world-worn travelers who had embarked for Van Anda some days previously, struck camp, and with cargo snugly stowed, headed the launch north. Along the coast they are now skirting, fine beaches line the low-lying shores at intervals. Dense forests prevail, and further back, the gigantic peaks of the Coast Range thrust snowy fingers into the blue of the sky. To the left lies Texada and Harwood islands, protecting the travelers from the westerly wind, which here is but a soft, health-giving breeze, the true breath of heaven.

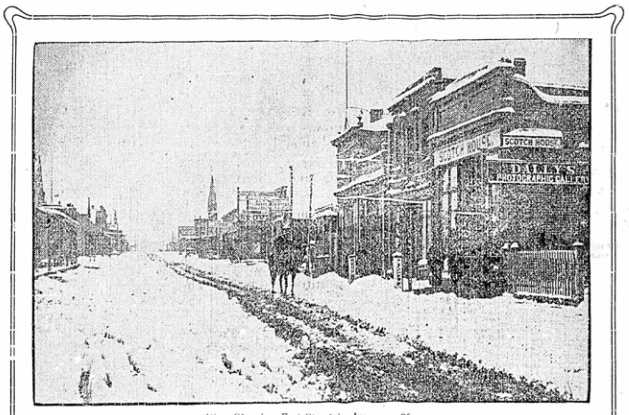

Passing through the narrow gap dividing the mainland and Savory Island, they enter the basin formed by Hernando and Cortez islands and the main crossing thus Malaspina and Toba inlets are passed. Raza island thrusts its bold rocky dome into view, with giant Redonda on its flank. Stops are made at various points en route, sometimes for a day or more, sometimes merely anchoring for the night in some sheltered nook. Toba and Bute are visited, the hunter securing several mountain goats, grizzlies, and black bear on the majestic mountains rising from these great canals. Deer were at all times available, it being sufficient to merely keep a sharp lookout in early morning or towards evening on the rocky shores skirted on their way. Many of these animals can be seen, especially on the islands, and a rifle shot and true aim only were required to bring the quarry tumbling to the water's edge.

In due time the Euclatou rapids are entered. These are, at certain stages of the tide, dangerous, but quite safe at slack. The travelers are now in a stretch of water which is perhaps destined to play an important part in Vancouver Island's history, for here a bridge must be built as part of the system connecting us with the mainland, if ever the Bute Inlet-Seymour Narrows scheme becomes a fact. As, however, the C. P. R., according to Sir Thomas Shaughnessy's recent utterances, are not at present considering this work, it is fairly safe to assume that it will not materialize in the near future, though in these days of swift and sudden changes there is always a likelihood of some other railway undertaking and pushing through the work.

While in the rapids the "lead fish" and hand-line were brought into action, with the result that a couple of the black ling were soon aboard. These fish, and the red cod (Sebastichys) are readily caught in all the northern rapids and deep waters close to bold cliffs. The operation simply consists in lowering the lead fish, which, as implied, is a leaden fish-shaped lure, with a short hook protruding from its head, to the bottom; then drawing it up with a series of short jerks, the fisher is quickly rewarded with a tremendous tug from some runaway fish which has swallowed the shining deceit.

After leaving the Narrows they voyage over a lovely inland sea, past Upper Valdez and Thurlow islands, slip through Green Point rapids, and soon enter Johnstone's Straits, the highway for the northern coasting ships. A few miles farther north, and they turn in towards Knight's Inlet, where, in a beautiful cove, with a lovely stream at its head, they make a permanent camp, and from whence, for a month, make excursions to various places as the spirit moves them. Their little cove is sheltered and out of the line of travel. They awake each morning to see the pure, clear sea like a mirror, reflecting each crag and tree distinctly and the sun, sporting through latticed boughts, picturing nymphs and fairies in the opalescent spray of the waterfall behind. They drink in deep draughts of sweet, pine-perfumed air, and thank God they are alive in this beautiful spot of a beautiful world. All is quiet and peace, rest and content. Before them lies an inland sea, perfectly sheltered, studded with hundreds of islands of every size and shape, among which one may drift for hours, or days, or weeks, according to one's pleasure. Every point rounded reveals new and greater beauties, every reef and shoal passed over is a garden of sea-weed, anemones, shells and polypi, among which swim myriads of fish. Though now in soft September, many beautiful wild flowers and ferns still adorn the damp crevices and shady spots, for these islets, in the early summer, are each a blaze of lovely bloom.

Wild bees drone in happy harmony, gay butterflies and beetles tempt the naturalist to acts of murder, our hunter has kept the larder stocked with venison and birds, our city man has ransacked the streams for trout, the sea for shell and other fish, the clear, warm seawater has given him new life with each morning's plunge; he is brown as an Indian, and strong as a horse, and so at last, camp is broken and preparations made for the home voyage. They have explored their sea of islands as far north as Alert Bay. The mighty islets have been visited, and many mountains climbed. Vancouver Island has been penetrated by the hunter, who, with two Indians from a neighboring village, brought out a giant elk, so now, in duty bound, yet, oh! so loth, they say farewell and steer again to the south, and passing Port Neville, they have on one hand the shore of Vancouver Island, and on the other that of the mainland, but three miles apart, the only point at which these two lands nearly meet, and passing here, the naturalist, who has traveled much, makes mention of the almost certain fact of a railway in the not far distant future, crossing the Chilcoten plains, passing by the head of Bute Inlet, and making for the coast at this point in an almost straight line, at which point a powerful steam ferry boat will swallow up engine, cars, and all, and in a few minutes place her valuable freight on the rails across the narrow strait on our island, from whence a quick run to Victoria gains hours to the westbound traveller. And further, he told them of the sudden rise of one of the richest islands in the world—Vancouver, only awaiting a railway to develop her immense resources inland, and minerals, and timber, and fisheries, which are now in her northeastern and richest portion, practically untouched and lying hidden; and in conclusion he said: "Victoria's whole aim should be concentrated towards the attainment of this end, for her ultimate success as a large city is on this largely dependent, and the railway which first takes advantage of and pushes a road to Vancouver Island's shore by the route I have spoken of, will hold the key to Pacific commerce, and when in after years that commerce is a certain factor, and when your island has given her treasures to the world, then your bridges over Seymour Narrows, which we are now entering, and the other bridges over the other waters we have passed, will be built, and a diversion of the old line will be made at the head of Bute Inlet to connect with these bridges, and you then will be an undivided portion of the North American continent. This upper part of your great island is the richest portion. Great areas of valuable timber still remain, but better than this, because of greater permanency, are the large tracts of valuable land, much of which can easily be rendered fit for fruit growing and for dairying. The fertile valleys of the Campbell, the Mahon, the Mintisk, and other rivers, besides many large intervening tracts, simply lie dormant for want of railway communication. In addition, the immense basin lying between the mountain chain near the West Coast, and the east side of the island, is practically one huge coal bed, and many valuable mines will be discovered and operated in the future, not to mention the known deposits of metals in that same chain of mountains."

CRIMINALS AND CRIME

In the Nineteenth Century Sir Alfred Wills states that he has long viewed with regret, not unmixed with alarm, the enormous multiplication of petty offences. He does not for one moment depreciate the work that has been done in the way of sanitary and other social legislation, all of which must be enforced by penalties, but he thinks there are a good many cases of over-legislation, both general and municipal. Dealing with the indeterminate sentence, which in the case of persons between fifteen and thirty-five years of age, has been tried in certain parts of the United States with success, he contends:

"America is the land of big experiments and big undertakings. Whether their subject be a Panama Canal, Tammany, trusts, or 'grafting,' those who embark on them seem to be deterred neither by novelty, expense, nor difficulty. We are less enterprising. It would be difficult in England to induce the legislature to vest in a board of five persons, taken from the ordinary walks of life, the power of releasing a burglar, a bank forger, or a highway robber after twelve months' detention, if satisfied that he had become in that space of time so thoroughly reformed a character that he might safely be returned to the walks of civil life, still less to provide that on such a board English political parties should be represented, and that the personnel and the proportionate representation of parties should be subject to change upon the defeat of a Ministry or the result of a general election. Yet in Ohio, which claims to be exceptionally successful, such is actually the law."

The Missouri board of railway commissioners have cut express rates 21 per cent.

Hudson Bay Days

Reminiscences by Hon. J. S. Helmcken

YOU ask me to give some information as to the observance of Christmas Day in the early days of the Colony, say 55 years ago. I may say at once that there were no set forms of celebration in those days, save that the chaplain, Rev. Mr. Staines, held divine service in the mess-room, a hall that served for baptisms, deaths and marriages, also balls and other recreation. At the same time Rev. Father Lamfpet, a missionary Catholic priest, assembled his flock in a shanty, built chiefly by himself and plastered with clay, which had wide cracks in it. This edifice stood on Courtney street, between Douglas and Government. Of course Christmas Day was a holiday.

In the early days changes came quickly. In 1852 Captain Langford, wife and family arrived. They were in some way connected with the then Governor Blanchard. T. Skinner, Esq., wife and family arrived at the same time. These were British and cultured people. Langford and Skinner were agents of the Puget Sound company, so with them came a large number of Britishers, to open up and cultivate farms at Colwood, the latter near the now Naval Hospital at Esquimalt. Capt. Grant and Captain Cooper were here, and soon came the noble, steadfast Leard, Mr. Kenneth McKenzie, wife and family. These brought their customs with them, so of course Christmas observances, and both ships helped the same. It will thus be seen that Christmas and other customs came with the immigrants, and from the planting of that seed, the present Christmas observances have grown. In Scotland and America the day is much more observed than formerly; all did as they pleased; shooting, hunting, fishing and visiting being the chief recreations, and getting as good a dinner as possible, perhaps practise at the Beacon, a barrel riddled with bullets, and standing on a long pole. This beacon was a mark for ships. Another stood near the water to the north. Captain Sangster used to perambulate here, a telescope in hand, watching for the annual Hudson Bay company's ship, the signal being two guns.

No waits at night, no chimes, no bells, no Christmas carols, no pianos, in fact no musical instruments of any kind, save the bell of the Fort. On one occasion a dance and supper were determined on, but where was the band? Nothing but Mr. Tod and his fiddle existed. Mr. Tod, a good soul, peace be with him, ever ready to assist, assisted. Mr. Tod had a peculiarity; when playing he would cast off a shoe, and kept time by stamping the resounding floor with his stockinged foot. However, an employee came forth, "I can help you, sirs, give me a sheet of tin." He got it, and in a short time came back with a tin whistle, on which he played admirably. This was the band, and every one enjoyed the dance and everything else. This band, too, was the orchestra at a night of private theatricals, in which J. D. Pemberton and Joseph McKay were the star actors, whilst the others handed round "port, ale-cider, ginger beer, oranges, lemons, and nuts—that is to say they would if they had had them.

There were no public houses nor public amusements at this time, turkeys unknown and beef scarce. In fact a rudimentary Christmas festival of a holiday, not a holy-day, type.

It may be here remarked that sixty years ago, Christmas day was but little observed in Scotland, and the same may be said of America. In England, however, where it was and is a statute holiday, Christmas was universally celebrated. Essentially it was a children's day and one of family reunions, and in those days when traveling was expensive and tedious, this meant more than it does today. The visitors received a joyous welcome, not a sort of empty every-day one. Plum pudding, roast beef, and mince-pies and nuts were the order of the day, for beverage various kinds of drinks. Holly and mistletoe and evergreens obtained in nearly every house, in fact it was a joyous day from morn till night. Games of various kinds were played. Toys for children, rudimentary toys and picture books, cheap, and such as the too knowing children of today would turn up their little noses at, and my goodness! the fun of the mistletoe and mulberry tree! Spreading of course from British Columbia, but in sober earnest to the immortal Charles Dickens' works, particularly the Pickwick Club and the annual "Christmas Stories."

The holly now, as in England, generally used, is not indigenous, but grown from introduced seed chiefly. The berried holly is now in great demand all along the Pacific shores, and American purchasers are eager to buy it. Curiously, it grows well in Victoria and neighborhood, but fails as it grows south. Mistletoe, a parasite, used of old in the mystic rites of the Druids, does not grow here, but a species thereof comes from the States, which serves its usual purpose, in spite of all moral reformers and the scientific maxims of the dangers of bacteria (bacteria of love) incurred in and by osculation. Who cares about this kind of danger when under the mistletoe at Christmas—the fun and pleasure of obtaining it or at "blindman's buff," and the pretended wish and effort not to be caught. None of this in Victoria in 1850. How soon after?

Oh, the merry days when we were young! Turkeys were rare, but Dr. Trimble had a turkey which he kept on his premises on Broad street. Daily he and Mrs. Trimble would visit his treasure, who with his fantail erect and feathers vibrating and with a gobble-gobble and proud step would show his pleasure at the meeting, but the doctor and wife although admiring and loving the proud and handsome bird, had murderous thoughts in their innerds and declared he would be a splendid bird by Christmas for dinner, so in due course he invited some half dozen friends to eat the turkey on Christmas Day. A few days before Christmas, the doctor and wife, on their daily visit, found the turkey had vanished. Inquiries were made for it, and the invited friends were assiduous in helping to unravel the mystery and concluded in the end that it had been stolen. They condoled and sympathized with the bereaved and tried to assuage the grief by telling Trimble and wife, that they would give him a dinner on Christmas day instead! The grief stricken parties accepted the invitation, as the best thing to be done under the unfortunate circumstances. So on Christmas Day they assembled very jollily. The earlier courses were eaten with fizz, etc. Now comes up the principal dish, which being uncovered displayed a fine cooked turkey! Trimble was a good natured fellow, so you may easily foretell what followed. Who stole the turkey? The echo of their laughing intertwining shadows reply Who-o-o?

A NEW MAGAZINE

A new magazine appears this month under the title of "The International." It is termed "a review of the world's progress," is edited by Dr. Rodolphe Broda, and is published by Mr. T. Fisher Unwin. As well as an English edition, there will be French and German editions, published respectively in Paris and Berlin. Each of these will be adapted to the peculiar interests of the country of issue. Thus, in the first English number, Sir Charles Dilke writes upon sweating and a minimum wage, and asserts:—

"All parties now in almost all civilized countries accept the provision that the law may properly deal with many of the conditions of labor, including in some cases hours, and in all certain methods of payment of wage. Outside Australia and New Zealand there has been little legislation anywhere to deal with the amount of wage payable to the worker. There seems to be no line of principle to be drawn which can exclude the latter consideration from the purview of the law. In the United Kingdom we have not hitherto dealt directly with wage, but we have gone so far as to enforce the determinations of voluntary arbitration, itself sometimes official under permissive powers of the law. A Board of Trade arbitrator has been called in in the case of some of the most complicated trades, with the most varying classes of work and the most varying wage, such as the Nottingham lace trade and the boot and shoe trade of Leicestershire and Nottinghamshire. His careful and detailed determinations have been universally accepted and completely carried out."

In conclusion, Sir Charles Dilke declares that there is little trace to be found in Great Britain of any opposition on principle to dealing by law with the amount of wage in those feeble or "sweated trades which cannot successfully deal with the matter by organized effort, such as that of which the coal miners have shown themselves capable, and says he looks for the declaration of a policy upon the subject by Government before the middle of the session of next year.

A teacher in one of the primary grades of the public school had noticed a striking platonic friendship that existed between Tommy and little Mary, two of her pupils.

Tommy was a bright enough youngster, but he wasn't disposed to prosecute his studies with much of a vengeance, and his teacher saw that unless he got a hustle on him before the end of the year he wouldn't be promoted.

"You must study harder," she told him, "or else you won't pass. How would you like to stay back in this grade another year and have little Mary go on ahead of you?"

"Aw," says Tommy in a blase tone, "I guess there'll be other little Marys."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.
